The blazing fire was bursting out of the window when the terrified man finally gave up all hopes of saving himself and slipped loose. He struck on the casement of the second window and part-ly turned over. This threw him far-out from the window, and part of his body struck on the electric wires below. This partly turned him over again and he struck on the sidewalk within a few feet of the building. Posicemen, firemen and spectators quickly ran to him and he was carried to the ambulance. He was uncon-scious when picked up and it was thought that life was extinct, but he lived for a couple of hours after being removed to Emergency hospital.

The awful spectacle of McKay and Dunning's descent was hardly over when they saw another man creeping toward the upper window nearest the corner.
